Resources

Hospital Exam

- ▶ It's often recommended that after a sexual assault has taken place, you don't bathe or change your clothes until you've gone to the hospital for an examination.
- ▶ It's important to go to the hospital after you've been sexually assaulted so the staff can make sure you're not physically hurt.
- ▶ Hospital staff can talk to you about testing for sexually transmitted infections (STIs) and pregnancy, if needed.
- ▶ It can be helpful to go to the hospital because the staff can look for physical evidence in case you decide to press charges against the attacker.

Making a Report/Process

- ▶ If you want to report to the police, you will be interviewed by an officer(s) and asked questions about the incident. It is their job to determine if there is enough evidence to press charges and bring the case to court.
- ▶ Even if some time has passed since the sexual assault took place, you can still report it. If you want more information before you make a decision about reporting a sexual assault, you can call the police anonymously to learn more about the process or talk to your local Community Based Victim Service Worker
